He angitūtanga: The opportunity

Auckland will look very different in 30 years. Our population could grow by another 720,000 people to reach 2.4 million. Be part of a team who are responsible for Auckland's growth and spatial strategy, helping our region become a place that Aucklanders love and are proud of, a place they want to stay in or return to, and a place that others want to move to, invest in or visit.

We have an exciting fixed term opportunity for a strategic thinker to contribute to how Auckland will grow and change over the next 30 years. We are open to those who are available for full-time or part-time work.

You will either lead or support strategic work that tackles the challenges and complexities of accommodating Auckland's growth - from employment to housing in established urban areas and newly developing communities in future urban areas. You will also work alongside infrastructure and transport strategy teams to ensure integrated solutions.

The subject matter and projects you will work on are diverse and far-reaching and your inquisitive, analytical nature will be put to good use in solving problems.

To get an idea of our team's strategic work, have a look at some of the strategic documents we have developed - Auckland's Development Strategy; Future Urban Land Supply Strategy.
