

Development Engineer

Are you ready to kick-start your engineering career or possibly re-start it in another direction?

If so, we have the job for you. Some places just offer more of what really counts and the South Taranaki District Council is a perfect example.

A recent re-organisation of the Council has seen the role of Development Engineer become a key decision-maker in the plan-invest-build framework. Working across the planning, building and asset engineering units, the role is responsible for approving new developments, ensuring they are designed and built to the right engineering standards and a good fit into Councils reticulated services. It's not just about subdivisions and new houses though. The role has been broadened so it plays a key role in earthquake prone assessments and future investment decisions in the town centres. You will also work closely with the newly established Environment & Sustainability Team, solving problems and finding sustainable solutions for our urban and rural community.

This is a diverse and important role that is waiting for someone to make it their own. We will consider recent graduates with fresh ideas or steady hands with runs on the board. We need a people person and a problem solver and consider these skills to be more important than the qualification you have. We will train the right person with the right attitude.

This is an exciting role in a district that has some of the most spectacular scenery in the world from Mt Taranaki's majestic cone to the rugged coastline of the Tasman sea. The region boasts outdoor pursuits to satisfy even the most active individual and is alive with opportunities.

If this role appeals to you, head over to our website www.southtaranaki.com where you can access the background information and job description for the role. If submitting an application, please ensure you provide a covering letter outlining your skills and experience for the role along with your most current CV.

Applications close at 4pm on Sunday, 10 November 2019.
